CENTRAL DISCONNECT

Located on Queen St, this sculptural element operate as a threshold in many ways. How it is understood to operate will differ from person to person, however we have decided to focus on two different ways it functions. First, the more 'obvious' understanding is that it is a physical element that is lodged in the middle of a space - it is fixed and creates a left and a right. The second understanding of the element is that it operates by covering/protecting certain aspects of a space while also revealing it. What is covered and what is revealed changes depending on where you view it from (front, or side). The diagram allows you to use the system in either way, or together, as it can be viewed from a plan or elevation perspective.
