Co-Hosting

The system explored through this diagram suggests how one particular area can become privy to another franchising element. Where smaller versions of the main element can be seen creeping into other areas. This is shown through the circles; the larger circle signifies the main branch and the smaller circles diverge into different areas which are then connected back to the main. Turning the original area into a host of the element. This not only allows for a merging of various programs but also can become an mode of access.
